

TUXEDO CUP FOR SWENY.

SECOND DAY'S PLAY IN THE AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT.

Menzie's, the Runner-up. Only Senior on the Odd Hole After a Tie—The Final Round—The Winner—The Winner's Reception—Tatter Prominent for the Consolation Cup

Golfing dinners were the vogue at the clubhouse and the cottages in Tuxedo Park last night, a happy sequence to a most successful day on the links. In the tournament the final heat for the Tuxedo cup was fought out by two St. Andrew's players, Menzie's and Sweny, the latter with a record of 100 in the first round, and only a consolation cup to be won. The consolation cup reached the semi-finals. It will be settled to-day prior to the handicap.

E. C. Kent and Sweny were first out in the semi-finals for the Tuxedo cup. Kent has played very consistently throughout the tournament, putting in a record of only one victory and one defeat. He has been the only player to have been in the first round, after being two up at the seventh. Kent finished a hole ahead, but he lost this advantage coming in, when after being all even at the seventeenth Sweny won the match on the last putting green. By strokes Kent had 42 and 43, Sweny's card showing 43 and 39. He had to play his last hole with one shot to go and he had to play his last hole with one shot to go.

Collier met with his Waterloo in the round with Menzie's. He showed a good game, but Menzie's could not be denied. He was equally strong on the drives, through the green and in putting, and won by the easy card of seven up and five to play. To do this he was forced to play ever, Collier halving six of them, although unable to win in the face of the opposition. In the afternoon, he was back in the contest. In the afternoon, he decided finally the ownership of the Tuxedo club. By winning, as has been told, Sweny showed himself a capable hand with the clubs. The Tuxedo folk admitted this readily. In their methods the two were a violent contrast. Menzies, an old public school cricketer in England, has taken up golf with a deep reverence for the Scottish form, style, and traditions. But Sweny is a Scotchman himself, and he has taken to the game with a design and handling them in wide defiance of all golfing tenets. In putting, he comes close to the hole, he uses an iron with a shorter shaft, swinging it in one hand like a croquet mallet, and his other innovations are as startling. In view of Sweny's low scores, perhaps it

John McClave & Sons, manufacturers of bicycles at 802 West Twenty-second street, with salesrooms at 371 Fifth avenue, made an assignment yesterday to William Harrison, a lawyer of 62 William street, without preference. The partners are John McClave, formerly Police Commissioner, and his sons, John and Stephen McClave, of 403 and 405 Albany. The bicycle business was started in April, 1893, the senior furnishing the capital, and it is said that he has invested altogether about $100,000 in the venture. He was drawn into this line of business, it is said, through leasing a part of his factory building at Eleventh avenue and Twenty-second street to the Meyers concern. Consider-in golf. But for a lucky accident on the last hole, however, the conservative would have won the match. The hole was a par three, and swinging out each was steady and careful, the round ending one up in favor of Menzies. The third puller continued to be a little off, and the hole fell down on the drive. Both pulled, Menzies getting into difficulties with a small rough area, costing him two strokes. Sweny won the hole by eight to nine. Menzies was again one up at the sixteenth, but he pulled out on the seventeenth, and the hole was a draw. Sweny won the hole by eight to nine. Menzies was losing the seventeenth hole. Each was on the eighteenth green in three. Menzies on the nineteenth hole was a little off, and the hole fell down on the far side. Menzies's long put was a beauty, but it just missed the hole. He had laid Sweny out on the nineteenth hole, but he pulled out. Strokes for the two rounds were also even, six each.

At the persons about the golf house crowded to the tee to watch the play for the nineteenth hole, Sweny had the honor, and he was the winner. He pulled the ball straight as a line, a questionable slice sent the ball straight as an arrow for the wooded hillside to the right of the hole. The ball landed on the green, and Sweny was again bounded at a fast back into a fine hole.

The Sheriff would have made an individual asset of the firm, but Mr. Fairchild, as has been pointed out, had already been assured some paper for his father in the lumber business. He resided in California, and it was his father, John W. Fairchild, who was the attorney for the firm. Mr. Fairchild, said yesterday: "In my opinion, if the assets of the firm were sold, the assets of the firm would be sufficient to pay the creditors in full. If the assets are sacrificed, then, I think the firm would be able to pay the creditors in full."

Mr. Shepard could not tell the liabilities of the bicycle firm. He thought they might be as much as $100,000, but he preferred to give no estimate.

Sheriff in Possession of the Leroy W. Fairchild Gold Pen Business.

The Sheriff took charge yesterday of the place of business of Leroy W. Fairchild & Co. (incorporated), manufacturer of gold pens at 214 Fourth avenue, on executions aggregating $12,500 in favor of the H. H. Brown & Co. (incorporated), a very old firm, having been established in 1843 by Leroy W. Fairchild, father of the present proprietors. The business was incorporated in 1890 under the New Jersey law with a capital stock of $150,000. In 1894 it was one of the capitalists of the company withdrew from the partnership, and the company was reorganized. In December, 1895, the factory was removed to 214 Fourth avenue.

in the early 1970s, said that the trouble between the two firms was not a matter of money. The liabilities of the two firms were between $30,000 and $40,000, and the normal assets probably were large.

But the "big" jobber, plushes, cloaks and rags at 197 West Tenth street, made an admission yesterday.

"We have a strong preference for $34.10," has been in the rag business for thirty years and added, "I have been in the business since the bankruptcy in 1971." A month ago reported assets $4,000 and liabilities $12,000.

An attachment was made for $2,445 by R. Smith & Co. on allegation of a former employee that on Tuesday a large amount of rags were taken from 197 West Tenth street, but the attachment was withdrawn and vacated the same day.

Young Homing Pigeons in a 100-Mile Race.

The first race of the young bird series from homing pigeons of the Empire City Flying Club of New York and vicinity was from Wilmington, Del., 140 miles airline, on Sunday Sept. 9. The birds were released at 8 o'clock, and after a head wind from the north and wind strong from the south-east. The atmosphere was clear and bright. The birds flew from the Hain field in toronto, and it is believed of the six here that they had been flying from the city for more than half their journey. The strategy of the New York section was 248 birds from recent experience. The flight was made on a fine morning.
